

Magic, Atonement and Love Inspire Author's Debut Novel

Aug. 17, 2007 – The Wild Rose Press and Keena Kincaid announce the upcoming release of Kincaid's debut novel, ANAM CARA.

ANAM CARA is a story of magic, atonement and love that spans a thousand years.

Branwyn ap Owen knows it's appointed for men "once to die, then the judgment," but his hell is to live again and again until he rights an ancient wrong. Unlike other such souls caught on a karmic wheel, he remembers the past, and he always remembers her.

Liza knows nothing of the vow trapping her in Bran's judgment, yet when he walks into her inn, she knows he could destroy the life she has carefully built over the years if she lets him get too close. Trouble is, Bran can't take a hint, no matter how blunt she is.

Determined to repair the damage of his first betrayal, Bran uses the knowledge of a thousand years to woo Liza. Yet just as he begins to regain her heart, a fresh betrayal threatens their last hope for love.

Set in Carlisle, England, in 1161, ANAM CARA is an historical romance with strong paranormal elements. It is slated for a fall release published under the Faery Rose Line.

Before turning her talents to fiction, Keena wrote as a newspaper reporter and editor, and worked in public relations and marketing communications.

For more information about the Wild Rose Press, Kincaid or ANAM CARA, contact Rhonda Penders of The Wild Rose Press at rpenders@thewildrosepress.com or Kincaid at keena@keenakincaid.com

###